

Style Underfoot

Design visionaries Annie Selke and Bunny Williams' freshest collection of indoor/outdoor rugs, BUNNY WILLIAMS FOR DASH & ALBERT, strikes a global note with patterns and weaves inspired by Williams' extensive travels. A deftly designed combination of practical and pretty, the collection goes beyond stripes into punchy patterns like plaids, zigzags, grids and other eye-catching graphics, finished in some of our favorite palettes and hues (blue and white is always right!). We're smitten with the Elizabeth navy rug (above), a vintage-inspired pattern made from 100% PET, a polyester fiber crafted from recycled plastic bottles. RIVIERA REIGN

MICHAEL TAYLOR DESIGNS revealed the addition of new designs and finishes to its Riviera Collection of outdoor furniture by award-winning San Francisco interior designer SUZANNE TUCKER. The casual but chic results pay homage to Michael Taylor's signature use of stone and wood, as with the Riviera cast-stone dining base with round or rectangular top, but it's the commanding presence of the Riviera dining arm chair (left) that had us at "hello." Following more than three decades of acclaim as an interior designer, Marshall Watson has manifested the masterworks of his oeuvre in his inaugural tome. Depicting a variety of distinguished projects alongside Watson's playful commentary, The Art of Elegance: Classic Interiors (Rizzoli, $55) will delight your senses and refresh your outlook. rizzoliusa.com

Internationally lauded floral designer Shane Connolly's sixth book, Discovering the Meaning of Flowers (Clearview Books, $50), deciphers the love language behind 50-plus botanicals—from the sentiment of a single red rose to the message behind a returned bouquet. This "language of flowers," or floriography, is one of the world's most traditional fine arts.
